£5million scheme to fix roads

THE Royal Borough of Greenwich is set to spend an extra £5m on fixing and maintaining local roads after it awarded a new contract for road repairs.

The money, which will be spent on improving road surfaces, laying new pavement stones and fitting new street signage, will be targeted on 100 roads in addition to the Council's existing programme of works.

Cllr Danny Thorpe, cabinet member for regeneration and transport said: "We know potholes are dangerous to cyclists, cause damage to cars and can lead to compensation claims against the council. That is why we are launching this scheme to ensure our roads are fit for purpose ahead of winter.

"It will make big a improvement to many of our local roads, going above and beyond the repair programme already in place – whilst also creating jobs for local people."

As part of the deal, the successful contractor will have to provide training through GLLaB for 100 local people in order to support the council's aim of making inroads into tackling long-term unemployment in the borough.

● To report a pothole go to www.royalgreenwich.gov.uk/potholes
The council will inspect the problem within two working days and aim to repair roads and pavements within 15 working days - sooner if an emergency repair is required.

We have always looked out for those left behind after war

SATURDAY June 28 was Armed Forces Day and events like the one in Woolwich gave an opportunity to thank our service personnel.

This is made more pertinent by the centenary of the start of World War One in August, when we will pause to remember all those who have played their part, including my own great uncle, Private Samuel Wakeham, who was killed during the Battle of the Somme in September 1916.

The British collective memory of The Great War recalls the death and destruction in the trenches of the Western Front. However, there is another story that should be remembered; the story of the home front and the families, the women and children left behind by those who went off to fight.

SSAFA (then the Soldiers' and Sailors' Families Association) was the only charity in 1914 caring for the families of troops sent to the front line. Without a welfare system in place, the government asked for help to fill the gap in support for the servicemen's families. Through two World Wars and every subsequent conflict involving Britain, SSAFA has been here for our servicemen and women and their families. Today we still support some 90,000 people each year.

The bottom line for us is providing support – for those who have done their bit for our country, and their families. They have made their selfless contribution and the least that we can do is be there for them in return.

Air Vice-Marshal David Murray, Chief Executive of SSAFA,

Lessons are simply good for business (tips) at Invicta

CHILDREN at Invicta Primary at Blackheath got their sums right and had fun when the school staged a week-long maths festival.

One day was linked to the school's sports day, and the children analysed the results, looked at working out the odds and probabilities of winning, and produced their own 'Grandstand' type video report.

Staff from Merrill Lynch, the investment banking arm of the Bank of America, gave up their time to run workshops on investing and working out the percentage returns.

Assistant headteacher Jodie Cawte said: "The children loved it because it was a competition that had a competitive edge, and involved them running a business to see how they could make the most profit."

There was also an all-day puzzle and problem-solving workshop, and a maths challenge where the children took on parents, also a code-breaking exercise, when the children pretended they were in an MI6 spy school.

Invicta also hosted an inter-primary school maths quiz, with teams of six 10 and 11-year-olds from Halstow, Meridian, Millennium, St Joseph's and St Alfege's taking part.

The whole school of 300 children took part in the week, from the nursery to Year 6. Jada Asraf-Clarke, aged 10, said: "While we were learning with the maths games we were having lots of fun." And Timofiy Bekh, also 10, said he enjoyed working with the Merrill Lynch volunteers. "We found out how to invest funds and work out how much money we got back, using percentages," he said.

Polytechnic to become maths hub using methods from the Far East

by Dick Townsend-Smith

WOOLWICH Polytechnic in Thamesmead has been given a leading role in ground-breaking plans to boost maths teaching for children and teenagers all over the country.

The project also involves bringing in 60 teachers from high-performing schools in Shanghai to promote Chinese-style teaching methods in English state schools.

It follows concerns that schoolchildren in this country are falling far behind their peers in the Far East, which could jeopardise this country's economic future.

Woolwich Poly is working with Thamesmead's Windrush and Hawkmoor primaries, and is one of just 32 schools and colleges in England to take the lead in a new network of school-based centres, or hubs, designed to improve maths education.

The programme is backed by £11 million from the Department for Education, and places schools and colleges in the 'driving seat' to tailor improvements for their area locally, concentrating on just one subject.

The Poly has been chosen as the lead school in the Maths Hub that will cover Royal Greenwich and the neighbouring boroughs of Bexley, Bromley, Lewisham and Southwark. Harris Academy, Greenwich, is also participating in a maths hub, jointly led by the Harris Federation in London.

The aim is to help teachers improve the effectiveness of maths lessons in both in primary and secondary schools. The project will include an exchange of teachers between schools in the hub and in China.

Two teachers from a local primary school will go to Shanghai in the autumn, and the Chinese teachers will return later.

Byron Parker, co-headteacher with Tim Plumb, said: "We are delighted that Woolwich Polytechnic has been chosen as a National Maths Hub.

"This accolade is a result of the wonderful work of our dedicated staff and the amazing achievements of our students. We look forward to helping raise maths standards in other schools across the region."

Cllr John Fahy, deputy leader of the council and cabinet member for children's services, said: "Congratulations to Woolwich Poly for being selected to help lead the new changes in maths teaching.

"Their involvement, along with Hawkmoor and Windrush, is testimony to the commitment of our schools to work for improved standards, not just for their own pupils but for the wider community of schools across Greenwich and in neighbouring boroughs."

'This accolade is a result of the wonderful work of our dedicated staff and the amazing achievements of our students'

Jeweller's sparkling success

GREENWICH jewellers Johnny Rocket has been named as the country's top independent retail jewellers in a prestigious competition.

John Pearce and his business partner Niall Paisley won the award in their category at the Jewellery & Watch London trade fair at the Saatchi Gallery in Chelsea last month. The two opened their shop in College Approach in July 2005, after building from scratch their dream of combining a French-style boutique with the elegance of a 1920s salon. It doubles as a jewellery gallery and a workshop, and offers finely-crafted creative jewellery, with a bespoke service to customers. John Pearce said: "This is quite an accolade for the Johnny Rocket team. Everyone at JR feels very privileged in receiving this award, which is voted for by our peers and other craftsmen in the jewellery trade, especially as we are about to enter our 10th year of trading in Greenwich. What a way to enter our second decade!" John is also an organiser of "Park it in the Market", the monthly Thursday evening meeting of the Mean Old Timers car club, which brings together classic cars and motorbikes in Greenwich Market.

The silver lining

DIGITAL Enterprise Greenwich played host to major names in the technology industries who came to network and talk about how their innovations can improve modern day life.

The event was led by US digital firm Silver Spring Networks and included presentations, panel discussions and workshops looking at technological innovations and how they can be used to make life easier, cheaper and more efficient by incorporating them in everyday life.

The California-based firm specialises in 'Smart Cities' technology specialising in networking technologies linked to the power grid and provides products and services for major utilities and cities around the world.

It chose Digital Enterprise Greenwich to hold the event inviting leading firms in the digital industries.

The event again cements Digital Enterprise Greenwich's reputation as a centre for digital innovation.

Greenwich Council leader Denise Hyland, gave an opening address and told those attending: "We have built some really exciting partnerships with major companies and with many small businesses coming through our innovation centre and we are exploring how we can work together to support each other's objectives. Today's event is yet another example of us working together to look at new ways of doing things and how we can create opportunities for smart city technologies and services."

Last week major French firm Bouygues announced it is creating a base at the centre, which is next door to the leading digital college Ravensbourne and also closely collaborates with computer science experts from the University of Greenwich.

Councillor Sizwe James, the royal borough's cabinet member for business, employment and skills said: "This is an exciting time for Digital Enterprise Greenwich. We're attracting more and more attention for our work on 'smart cities' and it's been fascinating hearing from experts like Silver Spring - whose work all goes towards improving people's lives with technology. We can learn a lot about how to deliver better services through digital technology and this innovative work all helps put Digital Enterprise Greenwich on the map. Greenwich Peninsula continues to go from strength to strength and that is good news for the local economy as a whole."

Double award surprise for community centre leader

A WOMAN who has played a key role in the success of Middle Park Community Centre in Eltham has been honoured by Her Majesty The Queen in the Birthday Honours list.

Community worker Lin Corbell was awarded the British Empire Medal last month. She has been involved in the centre in Middle Park Avenue for more than 30 years and is currently manager of the centre, which is funded mainly by the council.

The royal award was made for her service to the community.

Lin was also given a second honour this month. After being nominated by the Rotary Club of Woolwich, she received the Paul Harris Fellowship Award, the highest award in the Rotary International organisation, named after the American who founded it in the early 1900s. The Woolwich club supports the community centre's residential scheme, which takes young people off to camp.

Lin is due to be the guest speaker at the club's meeting on Monday (July 14).

Heitmann, who is also a trustee of the community centre, said: "Lin IS the centre, the powerhouse behind it. She is the Florence Nightingale to the area around Middle Park. She has worked for the centre for 32 years, and during that time has organised all sorts of activities, helping to make it a real community centre for everyone, from young children to pensioners.

"Lin takes a group of children to summer camp for two weeks every year, and stays under canvas with them. Woolwich Rotary makes a contribution to that, paying for transport costs and food. The centre runs a breakfast club for more than 100 children every day, and also a supper club, and children can go there to do their homework."

Lin told Greenwich Time: "The BEM is a fantastic honour for me. When I opened the letter that told me I was getting it, I was shocked rigid."

"For me, the best thing is all those people who wrote letters of support for me to get it. I think it's fantastic and I feel so honoured. I've had three letters already addressed to 'Lin Corbell BEM', and that feels so good."

"Middle Park has a fantastic management committee, and Woolwich Rotary are always there to give us a hand. Both the awards came as a complete surprise to me."

CHILDREN'S COOKERY CLUB : youngsters learn how to make healthier food choices, below, the 10 Minute Shake Up campaign logo

Movers and shakers

Roadshow helps children to move and eat more healthily

by Dan Stephens

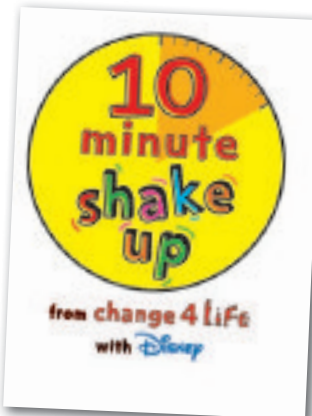

A DISNEY-THEMED goody bag is on offer to young people who sign up for Change4Life's 10 Minute Shake Up campaign, designed to keep young people on the move.

The goody bag will be sent in the post to youngsters who sign up for the 10 Minute Shake Up at the Change 4 Life summer roadshow for young people.

The roadshow is touring the royal borough over the next nine weeks, offering helpful tools and inspiration for families to get more active and eat more healthily.

It's been organised by Greenwich Council and Charlton Athletic Community Trust (CACT) and trained CACT advisors will be on hand to help residents with eating well, moving more and introductions to the many free, family activities that are available around the borough for summer and beyond.

Roadshow visitors will be given a local information pack containing all they need to know about having fun and staying healthy.

Research shows that 4 in 5 children are not getting the recommended 60 minutes of exercise per day while 40% do less than 30 minutes per day.

Youngsters who attend the roadshow can also sign up for the 10 Minute Shake Up - a fun exercise pack offering fun ideas for a 10-minute sport of exercise.

Those who sign up will receive a Disney goody bag which includes a free stopwatch and loads of Disney themed goodies.

The roadshow is part of a national campaign launched by the NHS's Change4Life campaign which offers healthy eating ideas to families.

Cllr Maureen O'Mara, the royal borough's cabinet member for public health, said: "Our Change4Life roadshow is designed to be fun and informal, while playing an important role in supporting local families to focus on their health. The emphasis is on helping people to find activities that are free or low-cost, and which you can incorporate into your daily routine for the rest of your life. I would urge families to come along to find out more about the full range of support on offer to help them live healthier lives."

● To find out when and where the roadshow will be near you, visit www.royalgreenwich.gov.uk/change4liferoadshow, follow us on twitter @RoyalGreenwich or watch out for flyers available at local libraries, GP surgeries and community centres.

Cycles donated to Greenwich mosque under Get Active health programme

by Dan Stephens

POLICE have donated ten bikes to Greenwich mosque to help members keep fit.

The bikes were presented to the Greenwich Islamic Centre in Woolwich through the Greenwich Get Active programme which offers a range of activities for all ages and abilities.

The programme, run by the royal borough, offers bespoke cycle training for beginners, leisure cyclists and those who want to commute on their bicycle.

Met police chief inspector Peter Turner and two experienced cyclists from the Limited Edition Cycling club went to the mosque to present the bikes and give a presentation about the advantages of taking up cycling along with Debbie Browne, health improvement manager from the Charlton Athletic Football club, last month.

Chief Inspector Peter Turner from Police in Greenwich said: "We are really pleased to donate the bikes to this worthy programme and to the Greenwich Islamic Centre. We hope that as many people as possible will take on board this great opportunity to keep fit and have fun at the same time".

Debbie Brown from Charlton Athletic Football Club said: "Cycling is a social occasion and can be very enjoyable. The best part is that whilst you have fun, you don't realise how many miles you do which obviously helps to keep fit. The kind of cycling programme we run is completely inclusive and it is for adults, children and for all abilities."

The programme runs over a year and fitness experts from Charlton Athletic will be at the Greenwich Islamic Centre on a weekly basis to provide training on cycling together with maps and routes to follow.

Tariq Abbasi, director of the Greenwich Islamic Centre, thanked all involved.

Cllr John Fahy, deputy leader of Greenwich Council, said: "Greenwich Get Active aims to provide inspiration and support for local residents seeking to get more active and improve their health. It's great to have the involvement of Greenwich Islamic Centre in encouraging their members to take up cycling, and fantastic that the local police and the army have been able to offer practical support in getting this scheme off the ground."

Bats love royal borough

RECENT surveys conducted in Greenwich have shown that the royal borough is home to some of the most thriving communities of bats in the UK.

The information was gathered by members of Plumstead Common Environment Group, on behalf of the Bat Conservation Trust.

Surveys revealed both pipistrelle and noctule bats to be living in and around Plumstead Common and Shrewsbury Park.

Results showed that the common is the second best site for noctules in the south east and 22nd nationally, from 800 sites.

Evidence suggests Plumstead Common might also be home another, nationally rare, bat called the Leisler's bat.

Year 6 pupils at St Joseph's primary school in Commerell Street, East Greenwich, turned reporters to produce their own newspaper as part of a News Day English project. The journalists aged 10 and 11 covered stories such as the World Cup, fashion and obesity. The politics team clinched an interview with the new deputy leader of Greenwich Council and presented their copy just in time for the GT deadline...

ON Wednesday 25th of June 2014, the politics team had the opportunity to have an exclusive interview with John Fahy, newly elected deputy leader at Greenwich.

We put it to John that a poll from the children's national newspaper, First News, showed that 82% of young people felt that politicians do not take their views into consideration. He responded by saying: "I am not surprised. I thought it would be a higher percentage".

He said he was trying to get members of parliament to visit schools across London to hear about what we have to say and get children more interested and engaged.

We told him that we did our own poll in our class and that 100% agreed that politicians did not care. He stated that it was a matter of phrasing and opinion, and that many polls are conducted. However, he did have some plans.

John actually asked us why we thought this figure was so high. Personally we think this is because adults don't believe children's ideas will be reasonable, and will be for their own gain.

John said: "As soon as the town hall in Woolwich has been refurbished, I would like it to be open for schools to walk in and do a tour."

Earlier in the year, our whole class visited The Houses of Parliament and we talked to local MP, Nick Raynsford.

We think John's idea to engage young people in the borough is an interesting one and we will be keeping a close eye on his plans.

Boxgrove came out on top in the annual multi-sport event for the DELIGHTED pupils from Boxgrove Primary School have a shield to show off after winning this year's Royal Greenwich Sportathon, which featured thousands of youngsters from the royal borough.

Pupils from most of the borough's 66 primary schools attended the event at Sutcliffe Park. The top three from each of the first four days went through to the finals on Friday June 27.

At the final, Boxgrove scored 1,925 points across sports hall athletics, wheelchair relays and a series of team sports, to win gold ahead of their Abbey Wood neighbours De Lucy (1,600) and Brooklands, from Blackheath, (1,340).

Brooklands pipped Cardwell (Woolwich) to bronze by just 15 points.

As well as the three scoring sections, the youngsters also took part in a non-scoring 'big dance', run and sponsored by Greenwich Dance.

Meanwhile 24 volunteers helped marshal the events. They were students who have completed Sports Leaders qualifications from Plumstead Manor, Crown Woods and London Leisure College, Eltham, the latter run by Sportathon organisers Greenwich Leisure Limited (GLL), the council's leisure services partner.

Another volunteer was Stephen Greenwood, who became a host for the borough at the time of the London Olympics in 2012 and has helped out at Sportathon ever since.

Brooklands' Jo Simpson said: "We came third when we did it last year and the children were delighted when they came back to have their medals presented in assembly."

She said they had recently had a visit from Paralympian, Andy Barrow, who played wheelchair rugby, and some children - different to those competing - had tried out wheelchairs lent by GLL.

She added: "We've got values threaded through our PE lessons like respect, competition and honesty and also driving themselves on."

Liz Rabey, PE co-ordinator at De Lucy, said: "The children loved the basketball hoops. We have them in school, but they also loved having a go in the wheelchairs."

"They were really proud of their medals and have been showing them off in school. It was the first team we had won a medal and last year was the first time we'd reached the finals."

"The children get the idea of team play, working together and supporting

WINNERS: Boxgrove celebrate as they are presented with their shield. Sportathon included a variety of activities including, clockwise from above, sportshall athletics, hockey, wheelchair racing, sprinting including in relays and handball each other and competing against other schools and good sportsmanship."

The event for Year 3 and 4 pupils, ages 7-9, moved to the enclosed Sutcliffe Park last year, from the Woolwich Barracks, which had hosted the Olympic shooting.

Using Sutcliffe Park, an established and well used sports venue, helped to enhance the idea of building a legacy after London 2012.

Cllr Miranda Williams, royal borough cabinet member for culture and creative industries, enjoyed taking part in some of the events as she toured the Sportathon fields.

She added: "Sportathon has been one of the most important Olympic legacy achievements. Now in its ninth year, it creates exciting opportunities for young people.

"We should also thank the volunteers, because without officials who give up their time there would be no sport."

Wheelchair races have been added to the original programme in the past couple of years to make the event more inclusive.

This has allowed special needs schools such as Willow Dene, in Plumstead, to take part, as well as pupils with disabilities in mainstream schools.

The idea is also to give children an experience of wheelchair sports, whether they have disabilities or not, and a sense of what it is like to be in a wheelchair all the time. The multi-sports section

Across the week, about 2,400 pupils from the royal borough took part, each doing two events in the morning and two in the afternoon.

Sportathon was set up in 2006, the year after London was announced as the venue for the 2012 Olympic Games, as part of a legacy programme.

It is one of 125 projects in London - and 1,018 in England - to be awarded the London 2012 Inspire Mark as an outstanding event which contributes to the concept of leaving a legacy after the Games. Since it began, 10,000 primary school pupils in the borough have taken part.

The gold, silver and bronze medals were awarded by deputy council leader Cllr John Fahy and the Mayor, Cllr Mick Hayes, alongside Eltham MP Clive Efford.

The museum has built a replica of a First World War trench which opened at the Royal Artillery Barracks on Armed Forces Day. The trench was one of many attractions at one of the biggest Armed Forces Day events.

It was built by soldiers from the Royal Artillery, volunteers and staff from Firepower and contractors working at Woolwich Barracks. History re-enactors showed how soldiers and nursing staff would have dressed, what their equipment looked like, what they ate and how they lived. And visitors learned how trenches were made, how soldiers used them and what the living conditions were like. Now the 6ft deep trench which snakes 50ft around the Barrack field, is open

Join the pros on outdoor stage

GREENWICH & Lewisham Young People's Theatre (GLYPT) and fellow theatre company Teatro Vivo are looking for enthusiastic performers to work alongside a professional cast in their forthcoming outdoor production of Mother Courage and Her Children.

It is all part of a major new site-based adaptation of Bertolt Brecht's play this summer. The production will take place on the Royal Arsenal site, opening as part of the Tall Ships Festival on September 5 and running until the 21st.

Performers can be of any age from all walks of life – all they need is to be keen and open to trying something a little different. The role of the local community performers will be to populate the site around the performance, and introduce audiences to the world of Brecht's timeless story, as well as performing, singing or guiding the audience.

Chorus and steward roles are open to anyone over the age of 16, or younger if accompanied by an adult. Specific dates for rehearsals and performances are available from GLYPT upon request.

To register your interest please call GLYPT on 020 8854 1316 or email info@glypt.co.uk

TAKE AIM: an historical re-enactor explains about life in the trenches to schools, community groups and the public for free guided tours.

Museum manager Michael Leydon explained: "The trench was built using an original field manual called 'Notes on Field Defences' dated May 1915. It was a manual on trench building for beginners and effectively explained where to put all the materials such as the barbed wire and the sandbags. It wasn't possible to follow all the plans and we had to modify them because of health and safety but we've stuck to the original First World War plans as much as possible. Advice from contemporary builders helped us to bridge the gap between now and 1914."

Gunner Mike Hargreaves, from 16 Regt RA, said: "Managing the carpentry and construction to get it just right and authentic was a challenge. It's great that local children and adults can now get an idea of what a real trench would have looked like."

Local schools, groups and individuals can book free visits and find out more by emailing education@firepower.org.uk

Flame and glory

A FANTASTICAL giant winged ship sailed into Royal Artillery Square, Woolwich, for the finale of the Greenwich and Docklands International Festival on June 28. Arka saw thrilling fire effects set to haunting Balkan wedding music which told a powerful story of the scattering of communities in war. The night time showcase was performed on the 100th anniversary of the assassination of Archduke Ferdinand in Sarajevo in 1914 which escalated into WWI. The performance ended a festival of outdoor theatre with 48 companies from around the world attracting 110,000 people over nine days.

HISTORY buffs will get the chance to 'meet' Sir James Thornhill on Saturday (July 12) when the creator of the interior of the Painted Hall at the Old Royal Naval College gives a talk. Sir James (1675-1734) was the first English artist to receive a knighthood. Working in the Italian baroque tradition, he was responsible for the Painted Hall and the paintings on the inside of the Dome at St Paul's Cathedral.

Residents have the chance to hear about his influences, his techniques and his rivals and just why it took 19 years to complete his masterpiece. Free performances of the talk take place noon, 1pm, 2pm and 3pm on Saturday and again on Saturday September 13. The grounds of the ORNC are open daily from 8am to 6pm and the college from 10am to 5pm. Visit www.ornc.org/ for more information.

Special award

YOUNG achievers with disabilities received the latest round of awards as the South London Special League completed its 10th anniversary celebrations on Thursday.

It was not just people with disabilities who received them, but also Jessica Landeryou.

Too young for a leadership award - as she is under 21 - Jessica was given an achievement award by the charity.

She is the assistant coach of Greenwich Powerchair Football Club, which currently tops the South East Wheelchair Football League.

Sharon Brokenshire, SLSL founder and project manager, said: "She is doing her level two football coaching and does a lot of work with the wheelchair football.

"We're very proud of her because she has taken on a lot of responsibility at a young age.

for young SLSL coach Jessica

During the evening, an hour-long dancing and singing show was put on by members, while several youngsters with disabilities received Jack Petchey awards.

Dean Milton, of the Jack Petchey Foundation, gave them out.

Jack Gillham, 17, has been going to special sports camps and events put on by the group for several years.

While SLSL began by offering just football, several other award winners have been taking advantage of recently-offered tennis sessions.

Gifty Ocansey, from Plumstead, Sami Tchanguon and Taylor Smikle-Isaac, who attend Charlton School, and Bailey Walker have been attending short tennis sessions through the winter at the Waterfront Leisure Centre.

SLSL, the chosen charity this year of the Mayor of Greenwich Cllr Mick Hayes, offers a new Wheelchair and Disability Tennis Club at Crown Woods College, open to anyone aged over 14.

Booking is required to accommodate wheelchair access. They also aim to provide tennis for those with visual impairments. The tennis project - 'One Game, One Love' - was started with funding from Sportivate to raise awareness of the tennis opportunities available for young disabled people.

Meanwhile SLSL is running regular coaching sessions for children with disabilities from the Charlton Park Academy on Fridays at Hornfair Park on Friday mornings from 11am-noon, as well as adults/over-16s.

Sharon said: "We have them booked until the end of July, but we hope to get enough demand to go through the summer."

"Some people have asked us if we will be putting them on in the holidays, but we need to know if people would like to have them then."

SLSL will also be running a free taster session at the Greenwich Get Active Disability Event - Tennis Open Day at Hornfair Park - from 2-4pm on August 2.

● For further details and to register interest in playing in the summer holidays telephone 07980 736188, or visit www.sl-sl.co.uk

Two courts are available outside - on the 4G artificial pitch and the multi use games area (MUGA). The offer is open to people living or working in Thamesmead.

Now's the Time was made possible thanks to a grant of £240,000 from Sport England's Community Sport Activation Fund.

It is advisable to check availability. For details ring 020 8320 4488 or visit www.sportingclubthamesmead.co.uk

Amir fired up for a medal

Borough firefighter hoping Commonwealth Games will result in a blaze of personal glory

by Ian Lamont

ANYONE in the royal borough who has encountered fire crews from East Greenwich station might have met an athlete who is heading to the 20th Commonwealth Games.

Hammer thrower Amir Williamson insists he is not going just to make up the numbers at the event in Glasgow, which runs from the end of July to the start of August.

"I'm looking forward to going to Glasgow and aiming to make the final and maybe get a medal," said the 27-year-old.

"I'm definitely looking to make the final and then anything can happen - I'm not just going for the trip.

"Among the top eight competitors who are going, there's about 2.5 metres between us in terms of how far we can throw, which in hammer terms is not a great deal.

"Anything over 70 metres on the day would probably win a medal.

"Training is going really well and I've thrown a couple of personal bests in training recently."

England Athletics allowed competitors to attain the required standards over the past 18 months, during which time Amir has thrown a personal best 71.01 metres.

That meant he was able to concentrate on training - ahead of a final couple of competitions in the next couple of weeks - instead of going to the British Championships 10 days ago, which was primarily for those seeking selection for the European Championships later this summer.

Amir has been throwing since he was 14, when he competed in discus for his school and won, which led to joining Blackheath and Bromley Athletics Club.

He has since moved to Enfield & Haringey and trains at Lee Valley and Norman Park, while combining training with duties on Blue Watch at East Greenwich Fire Station.

"It's a bit of a challenge working full time, especially with night work. You can't put in PBs in the gym if you have been working for four or five hours.

"But both things are what I wanted to do and I'm fortunate enough to be able to combine them."

Amir, who will go into a holding camp in Manchester two weeks before the Games, occasionally trains with Shaunagh Brown, a Greenwich Starting Blocks-supported hammer thrower who trains at Sutcliffe Park, who will also be going to the Games.

Two other Starting Blocks athletes will join them in Glasgow - Olympic silver judo medallist Gemma Gibbons and weightlifter Zoe Smith, who won bronze in the last Commonwealth Games in Delhi in 2010.
